Abstract

An authentication system uses the unique distribution of an invisible taggant as a 5   "signature" to identify an item. The verification is error tolerant. The taggant is made visible to a camera by special illumination. Inert taggants, with no optical activity, can be made visible by their thermal properties.

10